

She Saw The Window

Em

She saw the window in the sky
She saw the coat of the stranger
She felt the change as the wind swept by
She knew the breath of danger

In the home, on the road

Am

Em

She saw the face that no one knows

She grabbed her child from the field
Felt the flash behind her
Felt the ground begin to yield
The light began to blind her

In the hills, on the plain
Beneath the trees, it began to rain

She sang the words that no one heard
The sand began to reach her
Wailed and moaned on her child's bones
With nothin' left to keep her

On the road without a home
A wailing woman all alone
In the hills, on the plain
Beneath the trees it began to rain
